1. Orientation

1.1 Overview

Hotels and serviced apartments are occupied day and night by people unfamiliar with the building. Every Aurelle colleague plays a part in keeping them safe in an emergency.

1.2 First-day orientation

Every new employee must attend a fire and life safety orientation on their first day.

1.3 Knowing your area

Employees must know the location of the fire assembly point and the two nearest fire exits for their work area.

2. Alarm response

2.1 RACE procedure

On hearing the fire alarm, employees must follow the RACE procedure (Rescue, Alarm, Contain, Evacuate) and must not use the lifts.

2.2 Alarm types

| Signal            | Meaning                                   |
|-------------------|-------------------------------------------|
| Intermittent tone | Alert: stand by for instructions          |
| Continuous tone   | Evacuate the building                     |
| Voice message     | Instructions from the fire command centre |

3. Drills and practical training

3.1 Drill frequency

All employees must participate in a fire drill every six months.

3.2 Drill records

Attendance at drills is recorded by the Security team and visible in the employee's training record.

3.3 Night drills

At least one drill each year takes place during the night shift.

3.4 Extinguisher practical

Supervisory and engineering staff must demonstrate correct use of a fire extinguisher using the PASS technique during practical training.

4. Evacuation roles

4.1 Floor wardens

Floor wardens are nominated in every department and wear a high-visibility vest during evacuations.

4.2 Duty Manager

The Duty Manager must carry the evacuation master key and the in-house guest list during every shift and lead the evacuation roll call.

5. Guests requiring assistance

5.1 Assistance list

Front Office must print the list of guests requiring evacuation assistance at the start of every shift.

5.2 Refuge areas

Each floor has a protected refuge area next to the fire staircase, marked with green signage.
